

Brian P. Rangel

Hitmen Player of the Year

Named after our founder, the late Brian P. Rangel, the Player of the Year Award is presented to one who best exemplifies a standard of excellence both on and off the baseball field. In the classroom, among his teammates, or within the community, this individual has committed himself to doing his absolute best - a virtue that is fundamental to the Hitmen philosophy.

The recipient of this award is an ambassador to youth baseball in the Quad Cities and throughout the Midwest, projecting a positive image and example of the caliber of young people the Quad City Hitmen strive to develop.

To be nominated, one must establish a consistent record of progress among his Hitmen team; a high standard of scholastic achievement; and a willingness to be of service to others in the Hitmen program and his community.

Leadership, Commitment, Integrity, Character, and Courage are all virtues Brian Rangel demonstrated throughout his life. It is after these virtues that the recipient of this award tries to emulate.
